Police on the trail of Wirraminna thieves

After losing around $6000 worth of tools and equipment from the Wirraminna work sheds, it seems the police have some good information, and leads.

In recent months there have been three raids on the facilities, one unsuccessful, another netting around $2000 worth of equipment, and the last saw about $4000 worth taken.

One break-in was brazen, occurring in broad daylight, and was noticed by staff at the school, and another person driving from the sports ground.

Unfortunately none of the witnesses realised they were thieves at work.

The result has been the installation of motion detecting CCTV, and following the detection of another attempted break in, the system has been further upgraded.

Now the police have a considerable amount of information about the culprit/s.

They examined footprints found of the roof of the new toilets, have a name from the sound recording, have some finger prints, and a good description of the vehicle used.

Regrettably, none of this information can be tied to the original break-ins which occurred before the CCTV was installed.

Caught on camera, the latest failed break in attempt

Burrumbuttock Public School

Hi everyone!

We are back to remote learning due to the COVID Pandemic outbreaks. Whilst this is a very trying time for all of us, I am very grateful to the families and communities for the compassion and care that you show towards our children and staff. We are all in this together and it is because of the great community spirit that we will ride this wave, and hopefully keep our community safe. Take care out there and be kind to yourselves.

Kind Regards,
Ms Lynne Johnston,
Principal

Champion species and SMART environmental goals

Waratah students presented each of their champion species to the whole class, providing a species description and reasons why protecting them is important. As the school resides next to Wirraminna Environmental Education Centre, students were purposed with the task to develop informational posters that raise awareness of each of these species that can be found in Wirraminna.

These posters will be placed at the visitor centre. Posters included the bird's common species name, scientific drawings, population impacts, how and why we should protect them?

This helps students work on their persuasive writing too! Maddy introduced the concept of SMART goals, specific, measurable, achievable, relatable and timely. Students and teachers had to decide on their environmental goal and write it down with the key SMART guidelines. Each person presented goals, like planting trees and reducing single use plastic spoken about.

Our Book Week looked a little different this year and was held over zoom! The theme for Book Week 2021 was Old Worlds, New Worlds, Other Worlds. We had Book Week appearances from Dorothy the Dinosaur, Paddington the Bear, Spiderman, The Blue Sheep and lots more!

Preschool enrolments open

Enrolments for 2022 Please contact Fleur directly on either the Preschool Number 6029 3343 or the Preschool mobile 0480 186 371 to enquire for enrolling for 2022. We will be extremely full next year so please contact Fleur as soon as possible. Due to COVID lockdown we are unable to have an open day or have visitors on site to collect forms at this stage.

We are thankful for our families respect of the NSW Departmental of Education Early Childhood Directorate request to keep children at home unless they need to attend.

We are averaging about 6 children a day as a result. We have started an Alphabet game with everyone via our mobile phone and email. We are sending out a letter or two each day with an activity to go with the letter.

We are having fun doing the activities at Preschool and also receiving pictures from our friends at home about what they are doing. We have done A for Ant watching, B for Ball games, D for Dancing (Friday needed to be easy for those who are homing school older children as well) and over the weekend we have C for Cubby House.

Volunteers wanted to save injured animals

WIRES – Wildlife Information and Education Service (and indeed, our precious Native Wildlife) desperately needs new members who are willing to volunteer their services to provide first aid and care to sick and injured native wildlife.

Murray River Branch of WIRES covers from Little Billabong, to the north, along the Murray River as far south as Barham then north to Moulamein, Jerilderie, Urana and back to Henty.

A very large area with very few to no members in remote towns. This obviously delays getting urgent care to desperate, animals who are scared and quite possibly in intense pain.

Burrumbuttock has no trained, active WIRES member, yet we have a great variety of native wildlife in our area who often require our assistance.

Our Native wildlife is unique to Australia enriching our life and is an essential resource for the ecological health of our country.

To join us in WIRES you are required to undergo initial training which comprises of two parts. First part being online and must be completed prior to attending a one-day face-to-face workshop.

On completion of both parts you will receive your licence to care for our native wildlife.

To undertake this training contact: wires.org .au and go to training

We have one face to face training day in October and the online component needs to be completed before then.

Advanced training required for each species , so it is possible to specialise in your favourite animal. WIRES has many and varied roles including taking phone calls, shooters, carers, transportation of animals and people who can climb trees and attach nest boxes .

With covid shut down, I had to fill with something

When the woman rang me and told me I needed to be at the Wodonga Hospital at 7.30 tomorrow morning, I thought 'hell', I'll need to get up about six o'clock, and that's the middle of the night. She didn't seem to care.

Okay! Since it was mandatory that someone be available to drive me home, after my procedure, I required cross border permits for Estrella and myself, which was a quick and simple process on the web.

We arrived only a little late, obtained a permit to park in one of the Day Surgery bays, then sat down for the admission process, answering all those same old questions again, about covid. No, no, no, no, no, etc etc.

I'd been phoned the day before, and answered them, but they were to be asked again and again. I've no objection to being questioned in the present circumstances, but if they've been answered at the front desk, why is it necessary to ask them again, twenty minutes later in pre-op.

It was the second time in year I'd been admitted for a cataract operation, and since the first time, regulations had been relaxed somewhat, thankfully.

A year ago, Estrella was not allowed in the front door, but this time, she QR coded, filled in the log, and was given an approved visitors pass.

In the waiting room, there was a new experience awaiting me, in as much as that Koshie bloke was on breakfast television. I'd never seen him before, and after watching him for about ten minutes, I realised I'd just wasted nine and half minutes of my life. At my age, that's no small matter.

At the weigh-in I was two kilos heavier than I was the day before at a doctor's surgery, which was surprising, since I'd not eaten for 12 hours.

Then there were more questions, the ones I'd already answered, then the others. No, I don't have diabetes, allergies, metal implants, or take blood thinners. (Teeth implants don't count, apparently) No, I haven't had surgery in the last week, nor do I take any regular medications etc.

Whoa, I thought to myself. Son, your so healthy, what on earth are you doing in hospital? Well, mate, you're going blind - Oh! Woo! sorry; I am allergic to needles. Not funny. She'd heard it a million times before.

To make sure the correct eye was saved, I had to verify the written instructions, validate my signature, and then a large black arrow was painted in my forehead, pointing at my left eye, just to make sure the surgeon got the right one.

A practise I thought, was probably borne out of tragedy.

Then there were two drops in the specified eye, the first stung quite a bit, the second was okay, and that was about as traumatic as the episode was to become.

Out in the ward, the wait was three-quarters of an hour, when two more drops went into the eye, a loose fitting oxygen mask was applied, and an intravenous drip was put in my hand, apparently to de-stress me. Not necessary, but who was I to argue.

By now I'd lost all sight and all feeling in the eye, so it was off to theatre. The area around the cataract eye was swabbed with a steriliser, my face was covered with an operating mask, and the surgeon went to work, watching through a microscope, while a colleague watched through second one, yarning.

In tens minutes the op was done; the old lense was gone, a new plastic one installed, and my eyelid was taped closed.

Back in the ward, a cup of coffee and a round to sandwiches, was much appreciated, and half an hour later my wife was phoned to come and pick me up. The whole procedure had taken three hours. Not bad -ay?

Six-thirty that evening I untapped the eye, had a look around, and had an antiseptic drop administered.

The double vision was chronic, so I taped the eye shut again until next morning, when the double vision was gone but some blurring persisted.

Entrepreneur, abalone diver, endurance horse whizz — Tony

When you sit down with Tony Marshall to talk about his life, for a short article in the Bulletin, it's not long before you realise that writing a book would be more appropriate.

However, what quickly becomes obvious is there are two overriding characteristics, which have governed his life, and explain the reasons he's been very successful.

The first in an affinity with the land and its animals, and secondly, his capacity to organise and achieve outcomes.

Tony was born with Sydney Harbour Bridge outside his window, but when he was five he moved to Albury when his father was transferred as manager of the Commonwealth Bank, Dean Street branch.

At 11, he was enrolled at Hurlstone Agricultural High School, on the outskirts of Sydney, but after five years he'd had enough of academia, and went jackerooing at Temora.

But his living quarters were a chook shed, so after three weeks, enough was enough, and he moved back to Albury for 12 months, farm working at Waterview.

Back in Sydney he joined with his uncle, the inventor of the Dairy Kold milk storage system, installing the equipment in dairies, but then his father convinced him to begin an electrical apprenticeship.

After three years, it was time to move on, this time for six weeks abalone diving; worked he found too dangerous.

His life was about to become serious, and set a course for success after success.

His electrical training had given him considerable expertise in steel conduit installation, and he was asked by a friend, who was a project manager, to install the conduit on one floor of the new 43 storey T&G building in Sydney.

For Tony it was the beginning of many years of 16 hour days, 7 days a week.

After he'd finished four floors, the prime contractor was sacked, and Tony was asked to complete the contract.

His business grew rapidly, and with 40 -odd employees went on to work on the Opera House, the AMP Centre, Sydney Institute of Technology, Surrey Hills Police Centre, Lucas Heights nuclear centre, along with work in Fiji and at the Ranger Uranium Mine.

Then there were housing estates in Penrith, and two retail lighting shops.

Before working on submarines in Sydney harbour he was required to pass ASIO's security clearance.

At 26, he gave the business to his main man, and purchased a property at Silverdale, near the Warragamba Dam, where a few significant events happened.

First, he now owned some property, two petrol outlets, a general store, and a restaurant.

Second, he met the girl who was to become his partner, Angelina Patterson; and third, a friend began to talk to him about horses and endurance riding.

At the time Angelina was living on a small farm in Silverdale with her family.

She became interested in horses at an early age, as many young girls do. At 11 she had saved $60 pocket money and her father bought an ex-station horse, Gypsy, at McGrath Hill sales. With the saddle and bridle still to come, a head stall and a piece of rope sufficed.

Angelina finished her High School Certificate at Camden High School. After working a gap year at a thorough breed stud, preparing yearlings for the Inglis sales in Sydney, and a secretary role in a concreting business, she entered tertiary at Hansberry Agricultural College.

Tony sold Silverdale and moved to Bullio, to help develop a farm holiday and horse riding business, where his enthusiasm for endurance riding really took off.

On the back of Mr Magoo, a horse which cost $600, he won many endurance rides; one of his most satisfying being the Shoalhaven ride, over 100 kilometres, which he completed in 3hrs 57 mins.

As well, Tony purchased and trained horse for other friends, with one owner winning the Tom Quilty 100 miler twice, as well as a second, while two other Quilty winners were trained by Angelina.

Tony believes his success in the events was the result of bringing science into horse preparation.

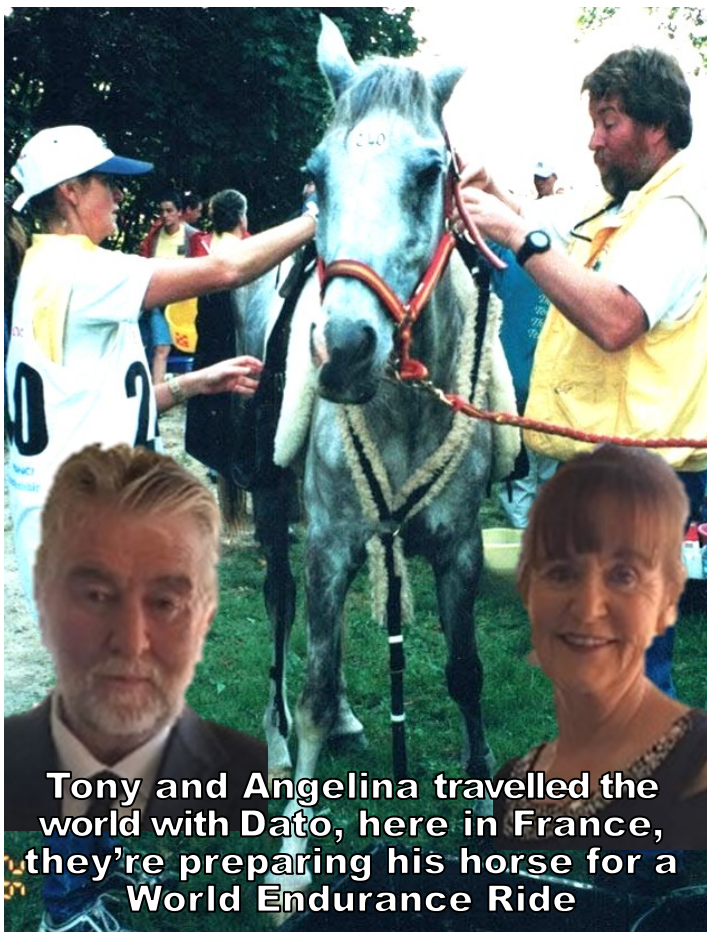

Whereas in the past, owners generally looked to diet to build stamina and endurance, he turned to the equine performance resources being used in the racing industry, including blood testing.

Then there was the administrative side of the sport, and at various times Tony was elected president of the NSW Endurance Riders Association, and was president of the Snowy River and South Coast Zones.

In the mean time, he found time to have full time work, as field operative with the Illawarra Electricity Authority, based at Bowral.

This was the beginning of another career which was to end up with him being a major player in restructuring of the New South Wales, electricity distribution system.

His skill was probably first noticed

Tony and Angelina travelled the world with Dato, here in France, they're preparing his horse for a World Endurance Ride

Marshall — in brief

when, annoyed at the inefficacies and inaptitude he saw in the system, he was elected shop steward, and successfully convinced the staff to accept that peak, and non core work should be outsourced.

From there he became customer services manager, and continued to work in the poles and wires business across the state.

In 1998 Tony was sitting on a bench waiting for Angelina to finish leg three of the South Australian Quilty, when he noticed an Asia gentleman alone, at the other end of the bench.

Tony, being Tony, thought the stranger might like some company.

Their subsequent conversation was to take Tony on a journey not even he could have dreamed.

The Asian was a vet working for a certain Dato Kamaruddiu, a right hand man of Dr Mahathir, Malaysian Prime Minister, and he'd been sent to Australia to investigate endurance riding.

The vet had many questions and a keen interest in the sport, so their conversation lasted some hours. When it was over Tony thought, that was that.

But it was not, as four days later he received a phone call from Dato in Malaysia, wanting to meet him.

It turned out, that while Malaysians had some riding skills such as in polocrosse, and jumps, endurance was not one of them.

They had recently competed in the World Championship event in Dubai, and the result had been an embarrassment for Malaysia.

He wanted a quote for the supply a suitable horse, and some guidance on taking part in an Australian ride.

When in Canberra Dato finally climbed onto the horse, for his first event, over 160 kilometres, Tony worried he seemed uncomfortable. While he finished fourth, once dismounted he was utterly drained.

Undaunted, and obviously possessing considerable courage, he persisted and improved, taking part in rides around the world, including France, England and Dubai. Eventually he became the world's number one endurance rider.

Tony was invited to Malaysia, ostensibly to advise on the further development of the sport there, but it turned out, Dr Mahathir wanted to express his country's appreciation for his help.

The Sultan leads the way, with his minders close behind, and in regal regalia

The occasion took place at a formal luncheon, in a Thai restaurant, with Dr Mahathir, his wife, and the full cabinet present. Dato still contacts Tony.

Back home they sold up at Bullio and purchased a property at Tumberumba, while at work Tony was now distribution manager, where he'd continued to improve work practices, and productivity, utilising contract engagement.

But there was another Malaysian on the horizon, when he received a call from the secretary of the Sultan of Terengganu, H.R.H. Mizan Zainal Abidin, (he was King 2006-11) who wished to come to Australia and try endurance riding.

Why not?

The Sultan arrived in Albury, booked the entire top floor of the Hovell Tree Inn Motel, hired a Greyhound bus, and a limousine, and then he and his entourage set out for Tumberumba.

The entourage of 50-odd included, three minders (bodyguards), personal attendants, chefs, several wives (although only number one was ever seen outside the bus), and an estimated ten children.

However, when the Federal Police learnt of the Sultan's visit to Tumberumba, Tony received an urgent call.

Was the Sultan here officially or privately? If official, the police needed to provide the security. Tony supplied an itinerary, along with other pertinent information, and the Feds were satisfied it was private. End of drama.

When wife number one was sitting on the patio, at Tumberumba overlooking the countryside, she remarked how she'd like to live in such a happy and safe place.

The Sultan returned twice more to ride in endurance events, the first at the The Rock, then at Mudgegonga, and he was accompanied on these rides by Angelina. He proved a capable rider.

Tony was asked by purchase some horses for the Sultan but that proved the end of their association, after he told the Sultan one horse was probably too difficult for him.

Tony was happy to refund the money, but the Sultan must have been offended, as Tony never heard from him again, and the horses were promptly moved to Western Australia, and that was the end of the relationship. The suspect horse never completed an event, as far as Tony knows.

Not that he needed the work, since he was now South Coast Distribution Manager, and although twice coaxed from retirement, he finally finished up for good in 2016.

While work had taken over much of Tony's life, Angelina continued to train horses and ride in events around Australia. She rode in four Quilts and became Victorian State Endurance Champion.

When five Malaysians needed horses for the South Australian Quilty, Angelina provided them, and was delighted when all five finished, easily passing the various veterinary checks.

Tony and Angelina purchased Glenview, in Hovell Road, in 2010, and she continues to train, and ride endurance horses for herself.

If the BB Saints Annual Luncheon goes ahead on 29th October, Ross Lyons will be worth hearing (Will he be coaching at Princes Park, by then?)

Ross Lyon is a former AFL coach who led St Kilda and Fremantle to Grand Final appearances and is widely-regarded as one of the AFL's great tactical minds. Lyon now shares some of his insights and opinions on the big names, the big moments in AFL football.

Lyon began his career with Fitzroy in 1985. After playing the last five games of the season and the first game in 1986 he missed the remainder of the season and most of 1987 due to injury .

He returned to play 19 games in 1988 and ended up playing 127 games over the next ten years. As a player, he battled injury but was renowned for his fearless approach to the game.

After retiring as a player, Lyon began his coaching career as an assistant to Robert Walls at Richmond in 1996 before moving to Carlton in 2000. He spent five years at Carlton both as an assistant coach and as the club's VFL coach

In 2004 he joined Sydney as midfield coach, and was instrumental in helping the Swans reach consecutive grand finals in 2005 and 2006.

Disappointing end to season

As we enter the month of September, we should be enjoying the football/netball finals series. Unfortunately, due to COVID our last round was cancelled, and the finals series have yet to begin due to NSW still in lockdown.

This was a disappointing way to end our home and away season, however, there have been a number of highlights over the last month in our netball club, worth celebrating.

Firstly, a BIG congratulations to local legend Rachel Koschitzke on reaching a milestone-250th games. What a massive effort. Not only has she contributed on the playing field to the club she is an active committee member, a former coach and is our Junior Coordinator.

Rachel's passion and love for the BB Saints is evident and we know she will continue to have a huge impact on the club in the years ahead.

What a fantastic, sunny day we had at the annual Rand Football and Netball Club Carnival. We had two football teams that played and 4 netball teams.

Our Under 13's coached by Jessica Tracey continued their winning streak to come away as winners on the day. In the final they played Jindera and won comfortably. It was a great opportunity for our club to put in two Under 11s team and a Net Set Go Team.

These teams did extremely well and came up against some strong opposition. A big thank you to our other coaches Toni Terlich, Rebecca Lindner and Lisa Burns. It was a successful day for our club.

Congratulations to all our teams this year for overcoming many a hurdle with injuries and COVID.

We have three teams that have finished in the top 6 and made it through to finals.

Congratulations to our Under 13s who finished top and undefeated. The other two teams that have made finals is our Under 11s who finished 4th and C Reserves who finished 5th.

We wish these teams the best of luck and hope that a finals series can be played in some form.

A massive big thank you to our coaches this year Lisa Burns, Mim Dunstan, Toni Terlich, Kylie Smith, Jessica Tracey, Tahleah Hereiuka, Anne Marie Hoodless, Mel Litchfield and Jaye Pearce.

When the St Kilda coaching position became available he beat 52 other candidates for the job.

Lyon is the most successful St Kilda coach by percentage of games won, with a 64.5% winning record..

While the 2009 AFL Grand Final was a loss for St Kilda, Lyon was named the AFL Coaches Association Coach of the Year. In 2010 the club finished runner-up for the second year in a row.

Move to Fremantle

In 2011, shortly after St Kilda's elimination from the 2011 finals series, Lyon signed a four-year deal to coach Fremantle, after Fremantle sacked coach Mark Harvey.

The coaching change was a surprised the football world, as Lyon left St Kilda with the best winning percentage of any other Saints coach in the club's history and became the first person to coach the Saints to four consecutive finals series.

At both St Kilda and Fremantle, Lyon was noted for enacting the most structured and defensive gameplans in the league, with a particularly strong emphasis on the entire team applying defensive pressure when the opponent has the ball.

Throughout his career, his teams were regularly amongst the best in the league for points conceded, if not the best – in 2009, when St Kilda won the minor premiership, it conceded only 1411 points in the home-and-away season, a full 367 points fewer than the next best – and have consequently performed well even when their points scored has been closer to the league average.

Despite its success, Lyon's game plan is not universally liked; many observers have criticised it as being 'boring' or 'ugly' compared with higher-scoring open game styles employed by some other teams, or by teams from previous eras. Lyon has also been criticised, for sticking to his gameplan at the expense of having an effective forward structure.
