TENNIS THROUGH THE AGES

The Walla North Walla Tennis Club celebrated Walla's 150th anniversary by holding an event - Tennis Through The Ages, on 5th April. The event was a great success, supported by past and present tennis players and supporters. The aim was to celebrate tennis in and around Walla over the years, which included a number of local clubs. We shared good food, light entertainment and great conversations, whilst enjoying a presentation, historical records and memorabilia. Guest speaker, Phil Shanahan (a highlight of the night) spoke of his long involvement in tennis and love of the game. It was a great honour to have so many life members from Sunrise, North Walla, Walla & Walla North Walla tennis clubs in attendance. -Judy Hueske

Assyrian Community visit from Fairfield to Walla Walla

During the 9th and 10th of March, we welcomed a group of 24 people from the Assyrian Community in Fairfield (Sydney).

We showed them everything our great town has to offer: public school, pharmacy, doctor and local businesses. And then in the evening we all enjoyed a shared dinner at the Lutheran church hall.

They were really impressed by the town and how quiet it is here compared to Sydney. They loved being able to meet people from our community that kindly came to spend time with them.

A special thank you to those who contributed to make the visit possible.

It was a great weekend and we look forward to hear if any of them would like to call Walla "Home."

Radio active mates get national award

A PROGRAM that fosters original music on the Border has won a national community radio award.

The Atomic Countdown, which airs from Albury's 2REM FM studios, claimed best locally produced music program at the Southern Community Media Association X-Awards this month.

Hosted by Josh Groch and produced by Max Bruckmann the program is linked to a website atomicmusic.space where musicians can upload songs which are then played in a top-20 format on the show.

"We're trying to support original artists," Groch said.

"We're happy to give them airplay because without a record deal they can't get on commercial radio and they might not have the right sound for triple j."

The show began a year ago and can be heard on Tuesdays at 10pm on 2REM and 10pm Fridays on Holbrook's 2GHR with podcasts put on the website.

WALLA WALLA COMMUNITY MARKETS

The Walla Walla Community Markets went well again in April. We had 18 different stall holders including Penny from Halve Waste giving out information on rubbish, recycling and reusable alternatives. We also had a visit from Sussan Ley, our local Federal MP for Farrer. It was good to see locals catching up over a coffee and supporting local businesses!

The next markets will be on Sunday 12th May, 2-4pm. Yes, that is Mother's Day. Bring Mum down for a coffee and cake and you're sure to find her a lovely gift as well. -Elisa Bartholomaeus.

Walbundrie Small Schools competed in the Athletics Carnival on Monday 18th March at Alexander Park, with our school doing very well. Of particular note were the efforts of Evie Torrens, Bill Phegan, James Heir and Isaac Lieschke, who represented Walla in the relay and won against Burrumbuttock and Rand. Evie Torrens also achieved age champion, and Walla Walla Public School came second overall! Congratulations to all. Billionaire Boy

Our students travelled to Wagga Wagga on Thursday 21st March to see a live musical called 'Billionaire Boy', based on a book by David Walliams (photo right). The play focused on the life of a boy named Joe Spud whose father became a billionaire and provided him with everything he could dream of. But the only thing he really wanted was a friend. The play was enjoyed by many.

Museum visit

On Thursday 11th April our students were able to visit Dawn Beachcroft's Museum to learn about the past, particularly about our soldiers from WWI and WWII. Herb Simpfendorfer discussed the significance of ANZAC Day with the students and an enjoyable sausage sizzle was shared. We thank both of these local residents for their ongoing support of the school.

Walla Walla Croquet Club News

After a very close competition, Walla was successful in retaining the "Battered Ball" trophy, with Albury second and Wodonga third.

This is a very competitive annual competition between Walla, Albury and Wodonga Croquet Clubs. Each Club has to play the other two at their home ground and at the opponent's home ground.

Congratulations to the Walla members who played so well!, Congratulations also to Alan Hunter as Runner-up in the Singles event at the Wagga Wagga Annual Croquet Carnival in March.

On Thursday 11th April, 5 of our members competed in the Wodonga Gala Day. It was a good fun day and Nola Scholz won the raffle..

Billabong High School News

Billabong Bowlers progress to the third round of Regional Competition.

Billabong travelled to Corowa last Tuesday to play against the winner of the Round 2 game between Murray High and Corowa High. These two schools had a see-sawing match with Corowa coming out winners with the narrowest of margins 13-12. In our match against Corowa we jumped out to an early lead and then had to fight off a strong revival, eventually winning 17-10.

Gear Up for Ag On Thursday, 4 April, the junior elective Agricultural class and the Year 11 Primary Industries class spent 3 hours learning all about health and safety issues and management of these issues facing people working (and sometimes living) in this industry. The National Centre for Farmers Health delivered the very informative, encouraging and interactive workshop. A big thank you to the Rural Bank and Henty Community Bank for sponsorship of the program. Each student went home with a full kit of PPE they can use when working in the agricultural industry now or in the future (photo right).

Walla Walla Silos – One Hundred Years Old.

By Tony Brinkmann

Walla Walla Silos story continued from April issue

1919 - Bring on the Silos!

By October 1917, the sites for the silos state wide had been fixed by the State Wheat board, and the state was broken up into three sections. Walla was in section 3, the Wagga section. All the local silo sites were in this group, the largest was Lockhart, with 2 silo sites of 6 "bins" each, 50,000 bushel capacity for each of the twelve silo 600,000 bushels all up. Others had 1 silo, some had 2, Walla Walla was to be in the 4 "bin" range, again 50,000 bushel capacity per silo, along with Milbrulong and Coolamon for this initial phase of construction.

In October 1918, the foundations of the Walla silos were in progress. Once these were finished, it would take three weeks until the foundations were set and ready for the Walla Walla bag stacks and silos in the 1930s construction of the walls. Once the crew working on the Culcairn silos had finished, they came over to Walla.

The winning tenderer to build all the Section 3 silos, was Walter E. C. Cooper, Master Builder, Melbourne, @ £140,110. All the machinery for the silos; conveyers, elevators, augers, man lifts etc. was supplied by Thomas Robinson and Co. Ltd. Sydney, @ £65,005. The total amount for steelwork on the section 3 silos, was £110,000, divided between BHP Co., Newcastle, and Messrs G. & C. Hoskins Ltd., Sydney. The Culcairn Council was required to supply 750 cubic yards of screened blue metal a month to all silo construction sites within its jurisdiction.

The construction of the 4 Walla silos, and 218 others across NSW, followed the Polk system, thought up by J.T. Polk of the USA. This system included the use of one simple apparatus; a steel centre mast operated by a winch, carried the whole weight of a circular sheet steel form work. This formwork included inner and outer sectional steel shells. These forms were filled and the concrete allowed to set, and the forms were then slowly raised. The structure grew about 5 feet a day into a massive concrete silo or bin.

In January and February 1919, the walls of the 4 Walla Walla silo "bins" were rising 4 to 5 feet per day, to a completed height of around 70 feet. The walls are about 10 inches thick. Working day and night keeping up a regular concrete pour, the crew of around 40 men worked by lights of a lighting plant set up specifically for night time work. Locals commented in awe on the vast amount of light emitted by these plants. "The railway yard is the favourite evening promenade at present" - local correspondent, Albury Banner, mid Feb.

In early March, the silo building crew moved on to Henty to build a further 5 "bins", and 16 carpenters had arrived at Walla to finish off the roof and associated building work, this took about 3 weeks to complete.

It is interesting to note that labourers for the silo job were offered 13 \- 6d ($1:36) per day, and carpenters were offered 16/-, ($1:60) as advertised in the Banner in September 1918. We assume they were 12 hour shifts as the concrete pour was constant, all information talks of "2 shifts", but nothing specific about the length of the shifts.

By April 4th, the Walla Walla Silos were finished. During the building of the 4 silo "bins" they had become cynically known as "Government Monuments". After a low-key opening of the silos, they were ready for use at season's end. The Wheat Board was rather happy with the achievements of getting all these silos built on time and ready for use by the 1919-1920 season. After all, £1,000,000 had been spent on all the 222 new silos across NSW.

When it came time to deliver grain, it was fine; grain came in as expected with no real hassles, no doubt the farmers were just happy to have their silos up and running. By January 1920, mid-delivery period, it was reported that the farmers at Walla were refusing to use the silos that were built to hold 200,000 bushels, they said that wheat would deteriorate in the silos and they preferred to stack their grain the old way. What was their reasoning? They alleged that the silos were damp and the grain was going mouldy. After a couple of high level government visits to Walla, Culcairn and Henty, plus a few other silos, it was declared there were no issues, and they were ready for the 1920-1921 season deliveries. Finally, in November 1920 it was announced that the Walla silos would not be receiving grain for the coming season; they were "deemed not fit for use". So, it was back to stacking bags again for this season. Those "stubborn old Germans" were right after all!

In September 1921, due to issues of water lodging in the base of each silo, portions of the silo bases had to be removed and rebuilt. At Walla, water was found to be 1 foot deep in the conveyor channel that runs under each silo, and hundreds of dead mice and numerous pigeons had to be removed before any work could begin.

To be continued in June issue..

Walla Walla Town Archive.

Situated in its own room loaned to us by the Greater Hume Shire, in the WAW complex, the town's archives are currently being set up as a free public asset for anyone to search items for family reunions, publications, functions, community events etc. Under the auspices of the Walla Walla and District Historical Society, it will most likely be run by a separate committee. This committee will be set up in the coming months.

We will be asking the community for donations of material to store in our archives, add to the material we already have stored, as a resource for the future, and to be accessible to all. As this will be a free service, any monetary donations will be gratefully received to assist us to buy more filing cabinets, and archival safe storage.

There is currently quite a large photo archive being put together, but we are also looking for written history. Documents, diaries, minute books, and other similar items are most welcome for donation, or for loan so we can scan them and create a digital copy for others to use.

With regard to minute books, we encourage anyone who has any old minute books from community organisations in their possession to consider offering them back to the community so they can be used as a much needed primary resource. Minute books hold a wealth of accurate information because of their very nature being an on-the-spot information source of an event or meeting held over a hundred years ago or just last week.

At present we are unable to offer any research facilities. Hopefully sooner rather than later, we will be able to offer this service. Interim contacts for the archive are Janet Paech, 0408 634986 or janetpaech@gmail.com . and Tony Brinkmann, 60 292296 or brinkade@bigpond.net.au. Please feel free to contact either of us for offers of donations, lending of items to scan, any general queries or offers of help.

Compassionate Communities: Creating a supportive culture for carers

In Australia we have an aging population and more of us are living longer with complex chronic health issues. This means that carers are looking after their loved ones at home for longer periods of time. Caring for someone with a serious or life limiting illness has its challenges and families need support, from both local services and family and friends as well.

The Culcairn Local Health Advisory Committee (LHAC), with the support of Murrumbidgee Primary Health Network (MPHN), are hosting a series of four free workshops in Culcairn this year, with the first being held on Friday 10th May at the Uniting Church Hall.

All community members and local services are warmly invited to attend the free workshops. At the first workshop, attendees will hear about the various carer supports that are available through Intereach, our local Commonwealth Respite & Carelink Centre. Community members will also learn about what are our barriers to offering, asking for and accepting help. David Gilmore, Culcairn LHAC chair, said that 'there are many reasons why someone might turn down help, even when they could really use the help'. David also commented that it was important for all community members to think about how to access support, even if they are not currently caring for someone. David said 'we really hope that our Culcairn community comes along to these workshops, because caring for others is something we all do, in one way or another'.

Weeds at Walla Walla

The state of play:

Bindii – We will win with a big continued effort. We have to win, because Bindii is so nasty. Fortunately everyone knows what it looks like, and hates it. Spray and chipping both work well.

Khaki Weed – We will win this one, as there are only a few patches left in our town. It can try to hide, but we will find every last plant.

Fleabane – I cannot see any way we can win. We can get rid of it in our backyards, but there could be too much on roadsides for us to tackle.

Patterson's Curse (Patto) is now growing nicely, but it is easily controlled with spray or chipping. There are only a few plants in Walla (right).

Hairy Panic – may be now in the Too Hard basket. The best we can achieve is control in our back yards.

My campaign to get rid of Paspalum is going well. It is seeding now, so it is easy to see.

As far as I have seen, Bridal Creeper is as good as gone.

It is worth trying Vinegar as a weed killer. Boiling water is also 100% effective. The first frost is coming soon. That will be the end of summer weeds. -Herb Simpfendorfer

Childcare Traineeships to strengthen youth employment in Henty and Walla Walla

Two early childcare traineeships are on offer at the Henty and Walla Walla childcare centres, further supporting the development of opportunities for youth to take up employment locally.

Both Henty and Walla Walla childcare centres have gone from strength to strength after reopening in January under the banner of the Greater Hume Council Children Services in response to almost losing both services at the end of 2018.

Greater Hume Council Mayor, Heather Wilton said, "Traineeships are a great way to offer local opportunities for young people. To be able to offer two opportunities, one in Henty and one in Walla Walla childcare centre is a boost to local employment."

"Providing traineeship opportunities at both services is a natural next stage of ensuring sustainability of both childcare services with access to qualified local workers."

This is not new for Greater Hume Council which currently has five trainees in diverse areas including libraries and youth, environment and planning, civil construction, civil engineering and waste and water.

Greater Hume Council is again partnering with ATEL, a long standing apprenticeship and traineeship provider to the region, to provide these traineeship opportunities to two of our local youth in childcare.

For initial enquiry contact Jessica Winnett, People & Culture Officer, Greater Hume Council.
